Sector Perspectives: Supply Chain Issues Affecting Specialty Distribution

- In September 2022, the ISM Manufacturing Supplier Deliveries Index stood at 52.4%, indicating delays and slowdowns in the supply chain, as a result of continued transportation delays and labor shortages
 - · This figure measures how quickly shipments are reaching customers. The higher the number, the slower the deliveries

- To mitigate the impact of supply chain disruption, distributors such as MRC Global, MSC Industrial, and other major industry players are building inventory buffers to cushion the impact of price increases, long lead times, and lack of product availability
- Further, many distributors have relied on technological initiatives to navigate through continued supply chain issues, by adopting systems for logistics planning, inventory management, and general automation
 - Per Holden Lewis, CFO of Fastenal Company: "Our marketplace continues to experience tight supply chains and labor shortages. To address these, we will continue to lean on technology and branch initiatives to improve productivity and an organizational culture that empowers local leaders to sustain high service levels."
- Supplier relationships have been a critical part of managing challenging supply chain dynamics, with companies maintaining constant communication and securing long term agreements, that foster deeper relations with suppliers to ensure timely deliveries and adequate supply
